The Native Sea Serpent, Sisiult, symbolizes protection, supernatural power and revival. In Coast Salish culture, Sisiult is believed to have created the rivers throughout Salish territory. The Sisiutl is a supernatural three-headed serpent that possesses shapeshifting abilities and the ability to turn spectators into stone when gazed upon. Not only can the Sisiutl change shape into a human or animal, but it can also transform its body into a self-propelled canoe that the owner must feed with seals.
